Kaltura Academic Media & Pedagogy
Flipping Your Classroom with Video

June 10, 2021

Tammy Jolley
Kaltura Regional Account Executive
This new series is intended to help you, our users who are faculty and instructional designers, with best practices for using video in your teaching – how and why!

30-minute sessions with time for Q&A. No more than 45 minutes.

Six initial sessions now finished, and we will resume in September! Second Thursday of each month at 2:00 PM EDT.

First six sessions are delivered by Kalturians that have teaching experience.

In the next series of six, we would love to put you on stage! What cool things are you doing with Kaltura? Consider presenting!

Please forward webinar invites to other faculty and designers! This series is for you!
What's your teaching style?

- Are you successful?
- Are students actively engaged in your class?
- Do you want them to be?
- What could you do differently to proactively engage students?
"A key focus of the flipped classroom is to place lower-order learning processes outside the classroom to reserve classroom time for higher-order learning activities."

Clare A. Francis

Flipped Classroom? What is required?

Flipping a classroom requires:

- Being Proactive
- Creating Active Learning Opportunities
